DETAILED ACTION

Specification

1. Applicant is reminded of the proper language and format for an abstract of the disclosure.

The abstract should be in narrative form and generally limited to a single paragraph on a separate sheet within the range of 50 to 150 words. It is important that the abstract not exceed 150 words in length since the space provided for the abstract on the computer tape used by the printer is limited. The form and legal phraseology often used in patent claims, such as "means" and "said," should be avoided. The abstract should describe the disclosure sufficiently to assist readers in deciding whether there is a need for consulting the full patent text for details.

The language should be clear and concise and should not repeat information given in the title. It should avoid using phrases which can be implied, such as, "The disclosure concerns," "The disclosure defined by this invention," "The disclosure describes," etc.

2. The disclosure is objected to because of the following informalities:

Page 2 line 36 - page 3 line 2, how can filaments comprise filaments? Examiner understands that "groups of filaments" can comprise filaments, but this is not what the specification states in the cited section.

Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 1-9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Russell et al (4176705) in view of Baillievier (408444).

Russell teaches an elongation cord adapted for the reinforcement of elastomer structures comprising a polyamide core and three to nine filament structured strands twisted around the core in a cord twisting direction equal to the twisting direction of the filaments, wherein the core has a thickness equal or greater than two times the smallest diameter of the filaments of the strands (Figure 1). While Russell essentially teaches the invention as discussed, he fails to specifically teach a first group of filaments and a second group of filaments, first group being twisted with a first twisting step in a first twisting direction, the second group being twisted with a second twisting step in a second twisting direction, and the first twisting step being different from the second twisting step, which Baillievier teaches (Abstract; Figure 2; Applicant's specification). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made, to utilize such a strand structure, so as to ensure the strength of the final cord. The ordinarily skilled artisan would know the benefits of utilizing such strands, and would have understood to use the, thus allowing for more flexibility and strength in the final product. In regards to structural elongation and elongation at break, such are material properties and obviously taught by the materials of the prior art, mainly polyamide as claimed.

Conclusion

5. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Vanneste et al (7152391), Poethke et al (6334293), Riddle (2113710), Helfer et al (6146760), Falcy et al (3686855), and Foley et al (4676058) all teach what is well known in the stranded cord art.
